

Vacancy

Internship position (f/m/d)

The Max Planck Research Group Adaptive Memory is offering students of psychology, neuroscience or related disciplines the opportunity to do 3-months internship (full time) in the fMRI project Emergence of Generalized Representations. Possible start dates are between January 2021 and April 2021.

REQUIRED SKILLS • Great interest in empirical neuroscientific research • an extremely reliable, self-organized person who uses their own initiative • High interest and motivation to learn about the background of our research • Motivated to actively participate in project and lab meetings • Fluent written and spoken German and English language skills.

PREFERRED SKILLS AND EXPERIENCE • Basic knowledge of data analysis in R or MATLAB • Basic experience in data collection and documentation.

WE OFFER • Close supervision with regular feedback meetings • Hands-on experience in study management and data collection as well as insights into MRI data collection • Opportunity to improve data analysis skills incl. MRI data analysis • Participation in project and lab meetings and institute wide research colloquia

If you are interested, please send your complete application (letter of motivation, CV, transcripts of records) as one PDF-file to Hanna Stoffregen:

stoffregen@cbs.mpg.de